Performance summary

The performance summary represents how you performed compared to expectations for your role and level. There are 3 possible performance summaries: Exceeds High Bar, Meets High Bar, and Needs Improvement. To determine your summary, your manager reflected on your work using information gathered throughout the year, along with peer feedback and your self-reflection.

Your Performance summary:

Meets High Bar

Your performance this year met Amazon's high performance bar for your role and level. Your contributions met expectations in delivering for your customers.

Leadership Principles summary

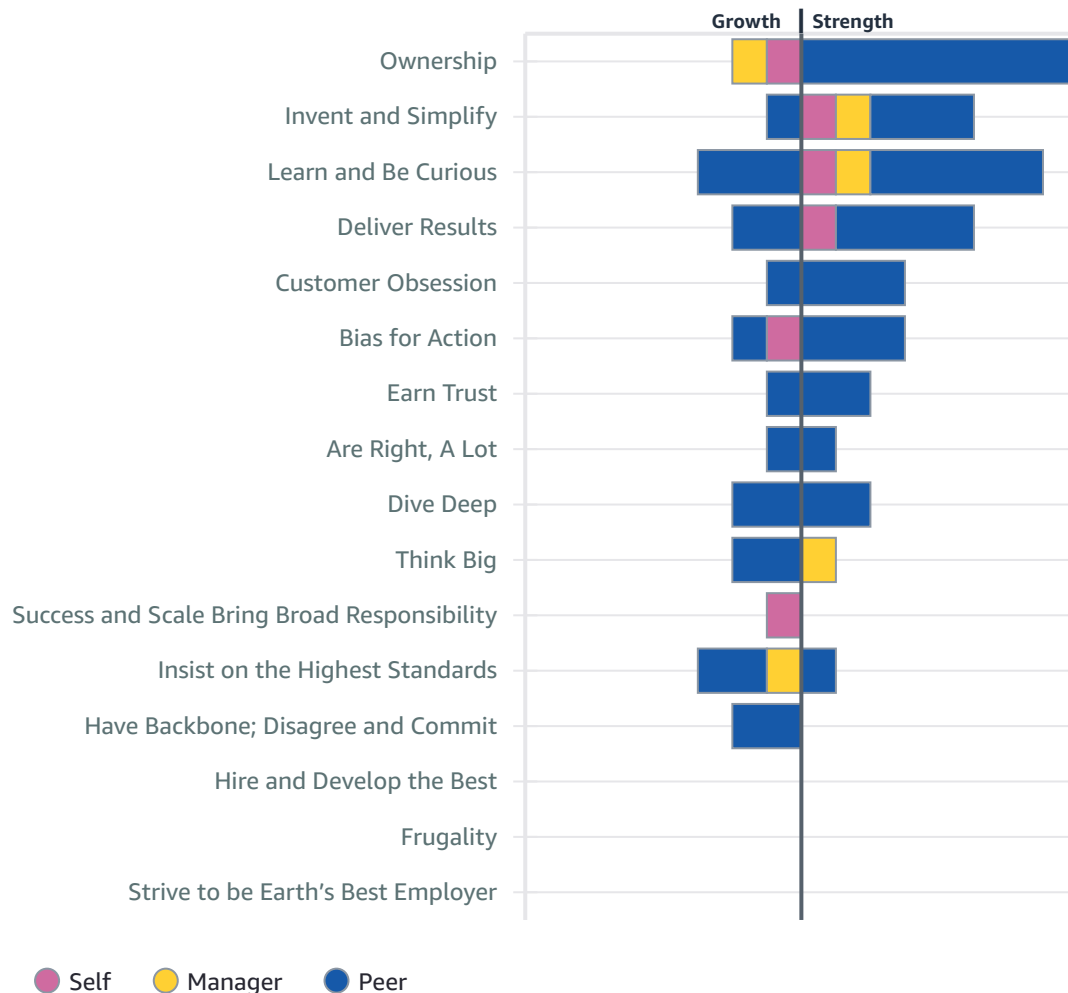

The Leadership Principles help define our culture, represent how we innovate on behalf of customers, and underpin how Amazonians work. The Leadership Principles summary explains your effectiveness at demonstrating Leadership Principles while delivering for customers at your current role and level. There are three Leadership Principles summaries: Role Model, Solid Strength, and Development Needed.

Your Leadership Principles summary:

Solid Strength

You consistently demonstrate Amazon's Leadership Principles in how you work. You are strong on many Leadership Principles and continue to grow in others.

Super powers

A super power is an exceptional strength - one that stands out most about you.

Your self-reflection

Describe what you're most excited about at work

As a salesperson, I am motivated by a variety of factors such as meeting and exceeding sales targets, a healthy competitive work environment, recognition for my work and career advancement. The unpredictable and varied nature of sales, including dealing with objections and unexpected challenges excites me as it provides opportunity to learn and grow. It gives me a sense of satisfaction when I find effective solutions to these situations.

Describe how you contribute when you're at your best

I bring fresh ideas, unique perspectives to the team and provide valuable insights for complex problems through my analysis of market trends and customer data, allowing for identification of growth opportunities. For example, in a recent project, I was able to draw on my diverse knowledge and experience to suggest a new approach to solving a particularly tricky issue. This helped to save time and resources and ultimately resulted in a more successful outcome for the team.

Manager feedback

You bring a lot of strengths to your work at Amazon. What stands out for me is:

Yashwanth's superpower is thinking out of the box and finding quick solutions to solve a given problem. He is great at independently figuring out answers in ambiguity like finding right stakeholders to reach out, initiating & closing discussions with them etc. With this ability, he has also coached his peers on few complex trainings which were difficult to understand in the beginning.

Peer feedback

1. Willingness to learn
2. Commitment
3. Ownership

Showcases ownership & bias for action

Yashwanth has excellent operational understanding, and he has a great attitude towards learning new skills and tools which are out of this role requirements, which makes him a great asset to the team.

Yashwanth has excellent process and operational understanding, and he consistently concentrates on finishing the assignment before the deadline. He doesn't avoid the work that is outside of his experience; instead, he works hard and acquires the necessary abilities to complete the task and deliver the desired results.

Yashwanth has good MS-excel automation skills which help in speeding up processes and reduced repetitive work. He is able to understand the importance of each task and can clearly prioritize his assignments. He is more of a perfectionist and ensures that the work done has no flaws and no corrections required. He is a reliable person for proper task completion.

Yashwanth is a quick learner and was keen to take up new tasks. He also worked on making the vendor experience on AD better which is really good.

Yashwanth is dedicated in his work and did commendable deep dive to test how size chart image uploads work in vendor central and supporting tools like Image Assist, etc. His detailed findings made it easy for me to understand what was needed from a Product capability standpoint. I also recall he was the only L3/L4 POC from Business team who took an active interest in participating in Hackathon, pinging me with questions and also submitting an idea. His enthusiasm towards work is a major strength

Yashwanth is very strong in Bias for Action, where he has been very active in getting things done on time. He also has Invented and Simplified tasks with his excel skills which has further helped achieve results faster.

Yashwanth works very closely with stakeholders to ensure that the work gets done. Being new to Amazon as well as a new business, he has shown various examples of invent and simplify to ensure that the vendor inbound process is hassle free.

Yashwanth's super power is innovative approach & detail orientation, he's pretty good at his job as a vops and tries to find out ways to simplify the work. He's also good with excel based work & data analysis related stuff.

Yashwanth's superpower is that he is knowledgeable about the process and is helpful and reliable when you need help at work.

Growth ideas

Growth ideas are suggestions of things you can do to develop and grow.

Your self-reflection

What growth ideas do you have for yourself?

I would like to improve my communication skills by becoming more articulate and speaking effectively in team meetings. This will allow me to express my ideas more clearly and contribute more effectively to the team. I also recognize the importance of punctuality and plan to work on improving my time management skills in order to be able to work efficiently as a team and contribute to teams success.

Manager feedback

Growth ideas from me:

Yashwanth should work on structuring the approach and articulating the outcome of his project so that impact of the tasks that he has taken up can be evaluated. He can do this by start writing sharp narratives around the work/project he is doing focusing on the problem statement, actions taken by him and expected outcomes.

Peer feedback

- 1. Set self goal and standards
- 2. Take up projects

I would advise him to focus on bringing more data driven insights up to his manager/team, along with recommendations for what could be done to take advantage of the opportunity. He has what it takes to dive deep, and just needs to channel it in the right areas so he can personally benefit from it for growing his career within Amazon.

I would like yashwanth to learn more about business as well as document writing to further improve holistically as a professional.

Take up more projects

Yashwanth can leverage his data skills and focus more on proactively creating innovative solutions/dashboards for his work area. This will help him to relate to the business better and develop his overall understanding.

Yashwanth could focus more on insisting on highest standards as this could often have a trade-off with speed. I can see he is already working on this and improving.

Yashwanth is confident and has the potential to grow ahead in this position if he takes the feedback provided to him (by his peers) in a positive way and put them in action to improve his performance to deliver the results.

Yashwanth should focus more on comprehending the process than merely following it, as doing so will offer him sound business expertise and enable him to pinpoint areas where he can make improvements.

Yashwanth should focus on improving or challenge the existing processes rather than following them or seeing them as a SOP.

Yashwanth should take up more tasks where he could implement his previous experience and improve the business.

Yashwanth tends to finish work with perfection which sometimes results in delay. I would want him to improve his time management skills by setting small-workable-iterative time bound goals so that he achieves faster. Also I have observed that he has issues in delivering his thoughts properly which he can work on by more frequent interactions with colleagues and stakeholders.

Thank you!
